Keywords Home visit, ethnography, social work practice, embodiment, child protection, the senses, movement, atmospheres. Social work, as Pithouse (1998) has incisively put it, is 'an invisible trade' in how most of it goes on behind closed doors, primarily within the privacy of the service user's home. But while the home visit is a key practice site where social workers and service users meet, it has been largely ignored in research and the social work literature ( Nicholas, 2012 ).
